Home Studio – A home away from home

At our Home Studio, learning goes beyond textbooks. This warm, homely corner of the school helps students develop essential life skills, etiquette, and moral values that shape them into kind, confident, independent, and responsible individuals. Students learn practical skills such as tidying their space, folding clothes, setting the table, helping with simple household tasks, and taking responsibility for their belongings. They also learn the importance of greeting elders respectfully, using magic words such as "please", "thank you", and "sorry", waiting for their turn, and speaking politely. The Home Studio also introduced dining-table manners, including washing hands before meals, sharing food, eating neatly, and thanking those who serve. Through these experiences, children understand the values of respect, gratitude, empathy, and teamwork. They learn to listen to parents, help their siblings, keep their home clean, and welcome guests with warmth and humility. Learning basic household skills is valuable, as it prepares children to manage everyday responsibilities with confidence. Good table manners and courteous behaviour in social settings reflect a child's upbringing and self-discipline. By embedding these habits at an early age, we nurture courteous, responsible, independent, and well-mannered individuals.

The session began with the idea that teaching is, at its heart, an act of communication. Whatever the subject knowledge the teacher possess, learning outcomes depend on how clearly and sensitively that knowledge is conveyed. Participants were reminded that communication includes not only words but also body language, tone, facial expressions, gestures, posture and silence.

A positive teacher–student relationship can create the emotional safety in which children are willing to participate, take risks and learn from mistakes. It highlighted the importance of clear, empathetic and professional communication in building trust with students and parents.

Little Steps , Big Safety : Learning Traffic Rules and Safety

The Grade III students learned about traffic rules, road safety, and safety at home through an engaging, activity-based teaching–learning methodology. The teacher used flashcards to explain traffic rules and safety measures. A traffic signal model was created using a tissue paper roll and coloured paper to demonstrate the significance of red, yellow, and green lights. Students also learned the safe way to cross the road using a zebra crossing by following the "Right–Left–Right" method and checking for approaching vehicles before crossing. These hands-on activities enhanced their safety awareness and encouraged responsible behaviour in daily life.

Every Drop Counts – Exploring the Science of Time

Grade VII students prepared a simple water clock using a plastic water bottle as part of their Subject Enrichment Activity. They observed the steady flow of water, recorded the time at regular intervals, and calculated the time taken for the water level to change. Through this hands-on activity, students applied their knowledge of time measurement, analysed observations, and evaluated the relationship between water flow and time. The activity enhanced their scientific thinking, observation, analytical skills, and creativity, connecting classroom learning with real-life applications.

Experiential Learning: Safety and First Aid in School

Grade III students engaged in experiential learning by exploring the school playground and identifying essential safety practices in the playground, classroom, corridors, and staircases. They learned the importance of avoiding pushing, kicking, and running in common areas to prevent accidents. Students were also sensitised to basic first-aid practices, including staying calm, informing a teacher immediately, and ensuring that an injured person receives appropriate assistance. This activity fostered scientific observation, safety awareness, and a sense of responsibility for their own well-being and that of others.
